

Self-Identification Survey Summary

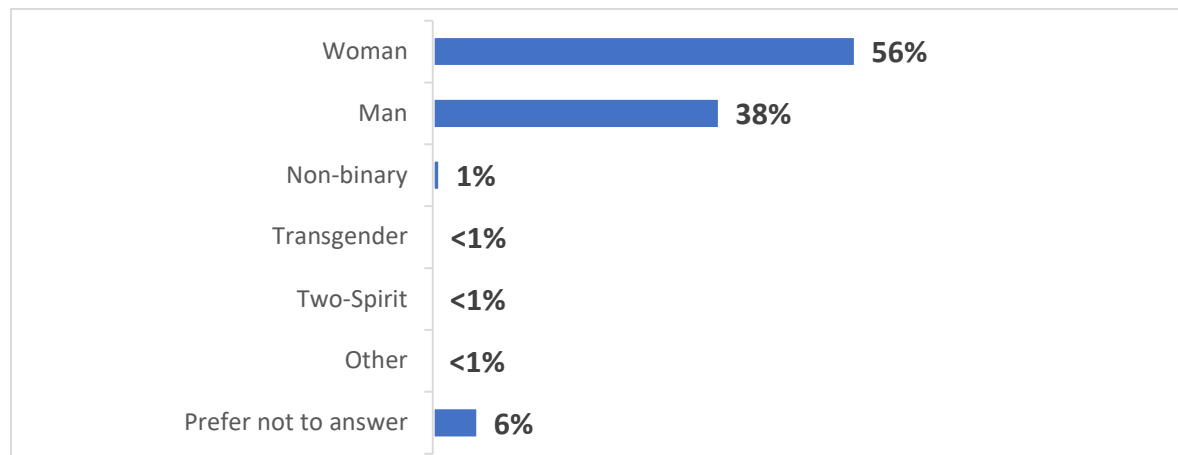

Notes:

- Percentages in graphs may not always sum to 100% due to rounding.
- On some questions, respondents could give more than one response and thus percentages may not total 100%.
- Bar charts may not show the % label for bars with less than 3% for readability.

Gender Identity

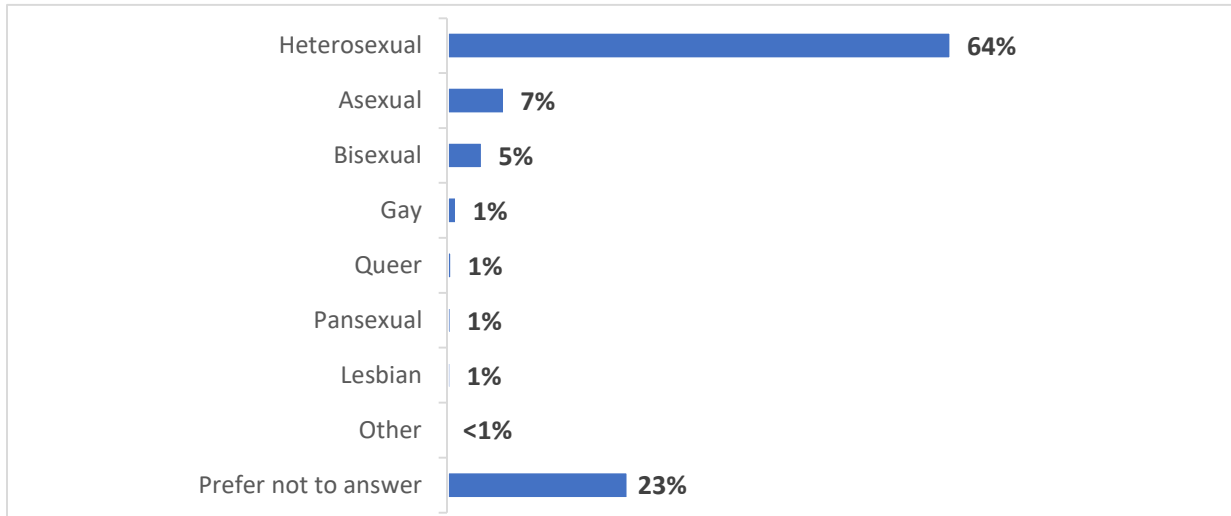

The majority of learners identify as a woman, with slightly more than one third identifying as a man. Around 1% self-identify as a gender other than a man or woman.

Sexual Identity

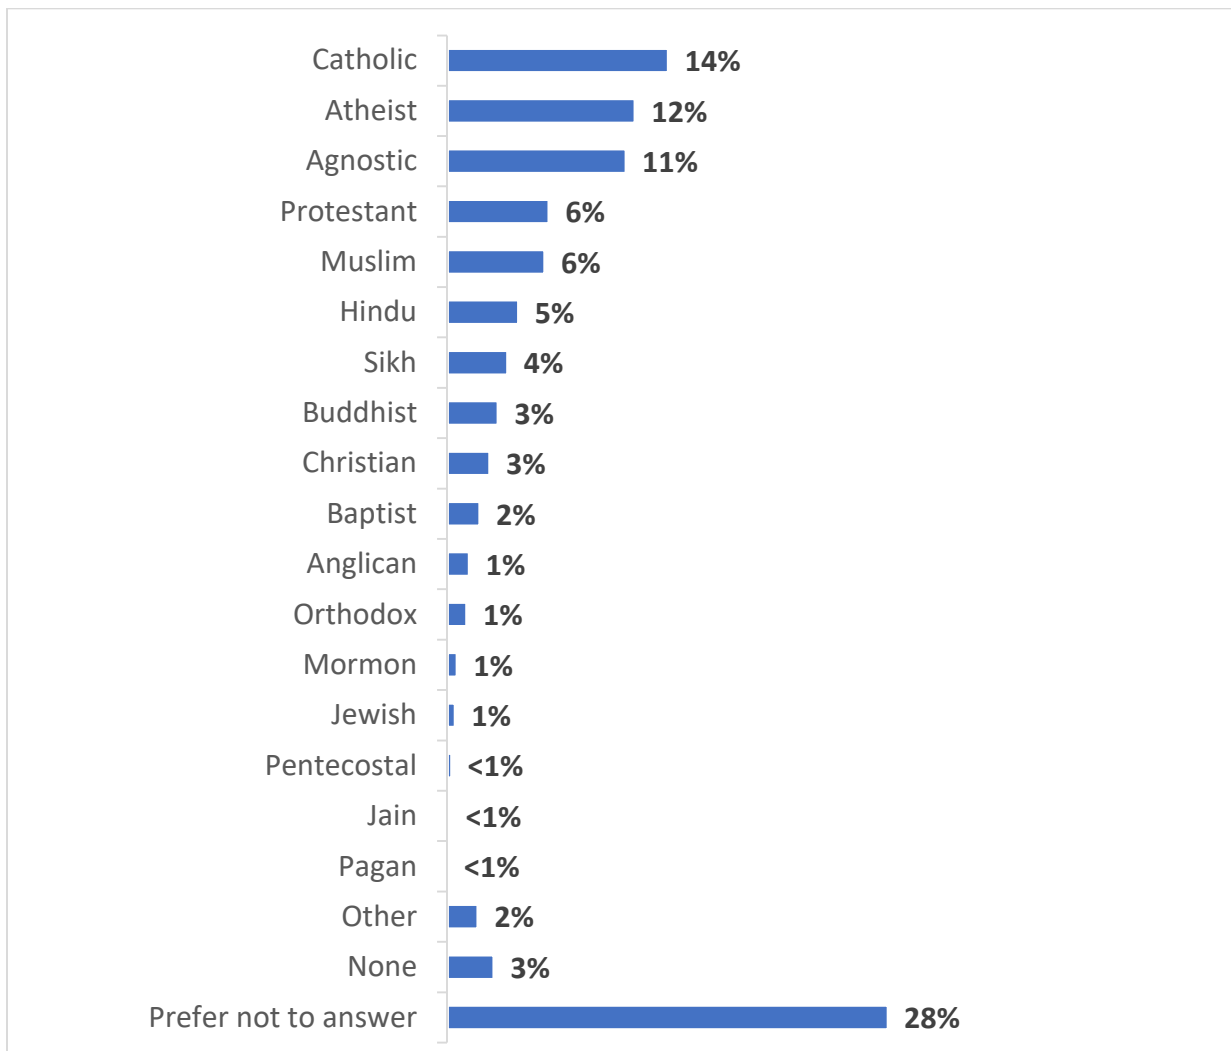

Just over 10% of learners self-identify as non-heterosexual, with asexual and bisexual being the most common. Twenty-three percent (23%) preferred not to identify their sexuality.

Religious Affiliation

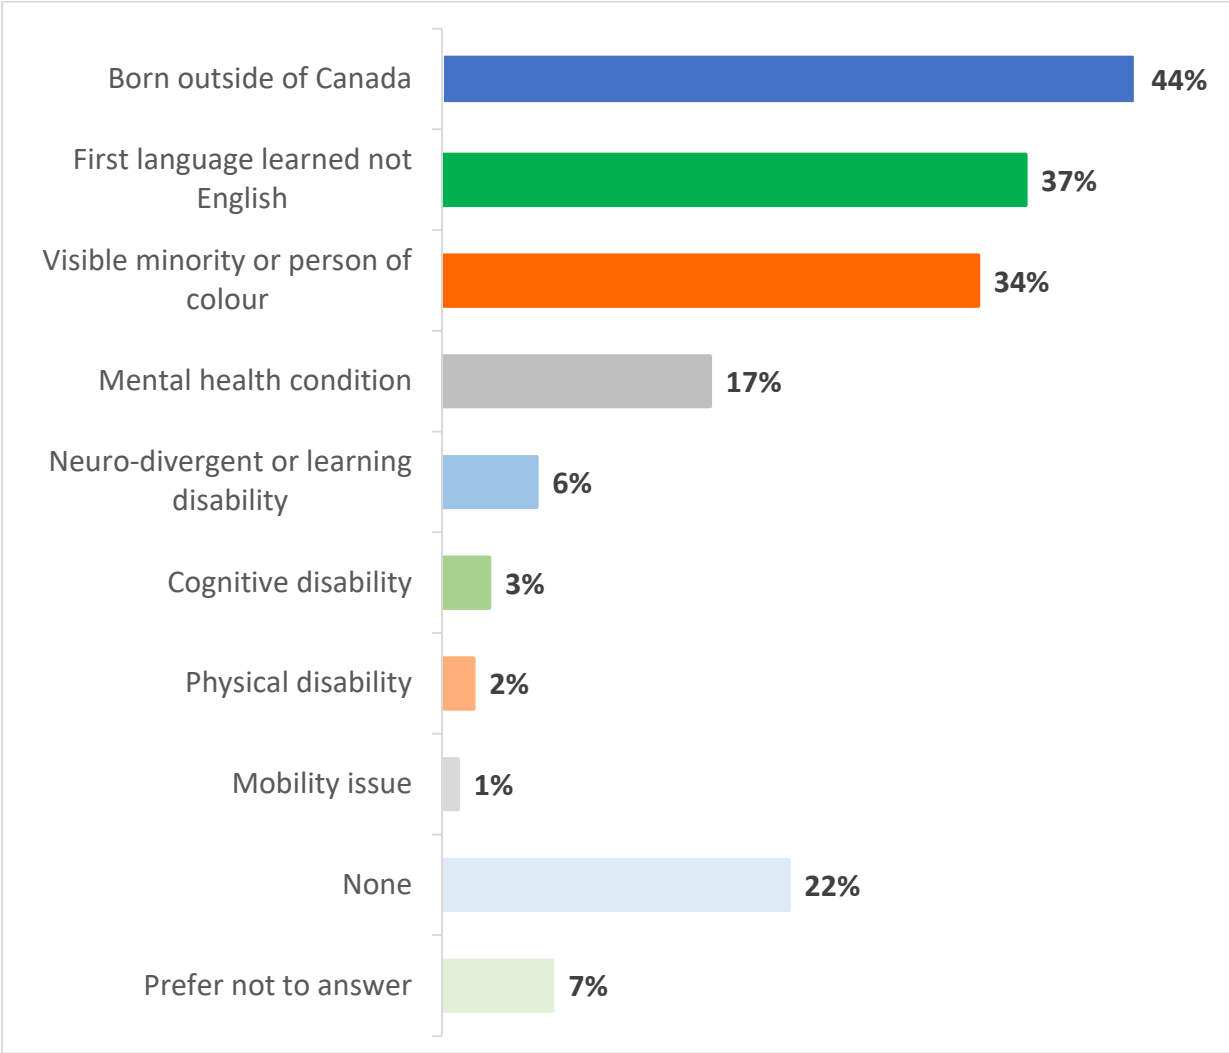

Learners have a mix of religious affiliations, with no single religion accounting for more than 14% of learners, although 28% of learners preferred not to answer the question.

Other Diversity Groups

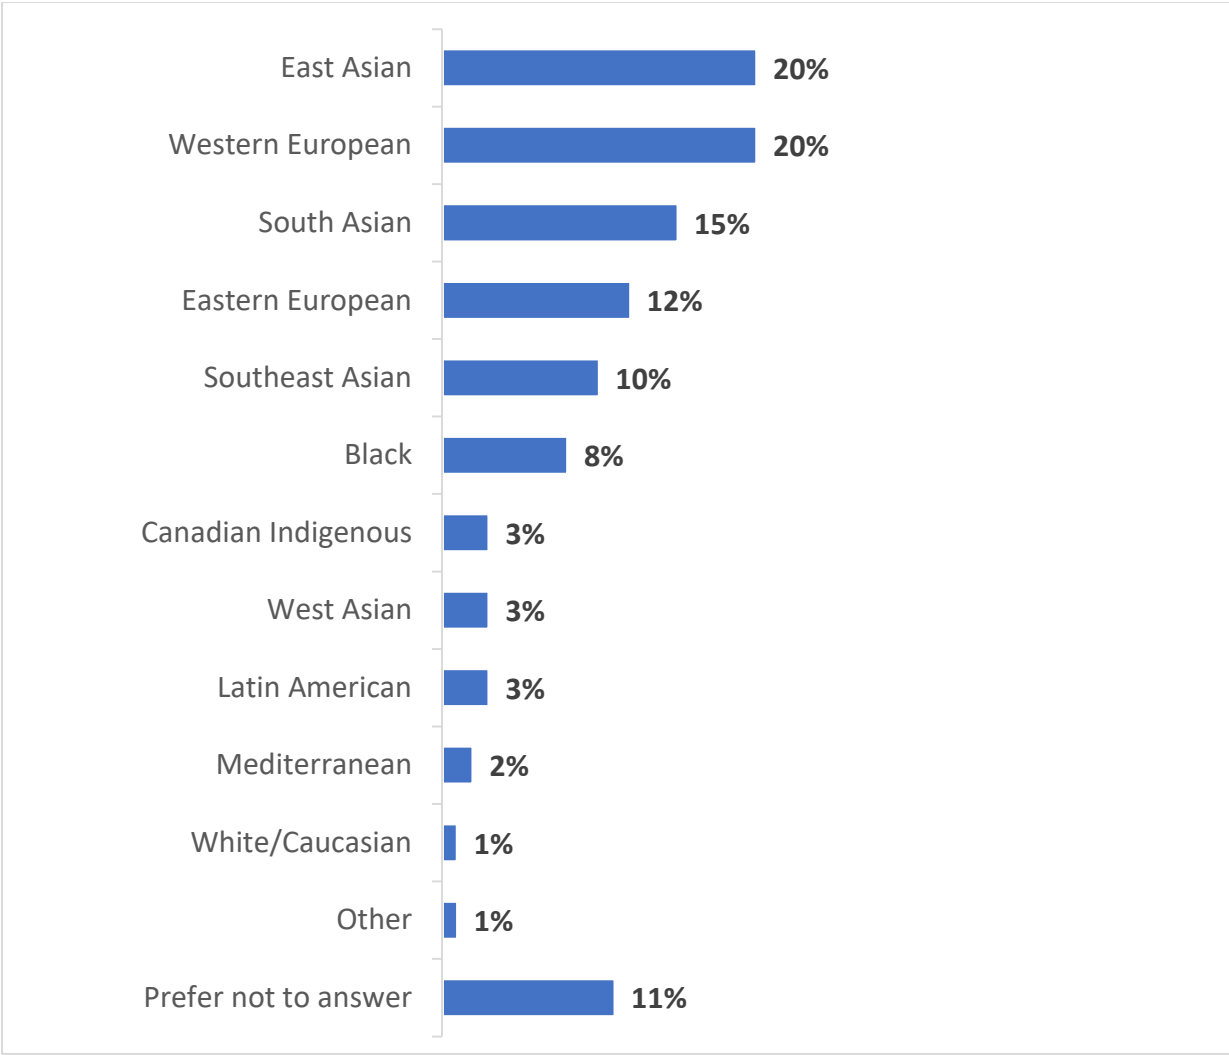

Learners represent many groups, including about one third who identify as a visible minority or person of colour or whose first language is not English.

About one fifth identify as having a mental health condition, while one tenth have a disability, either neuro-divergent/learning, physical, or cognitive.

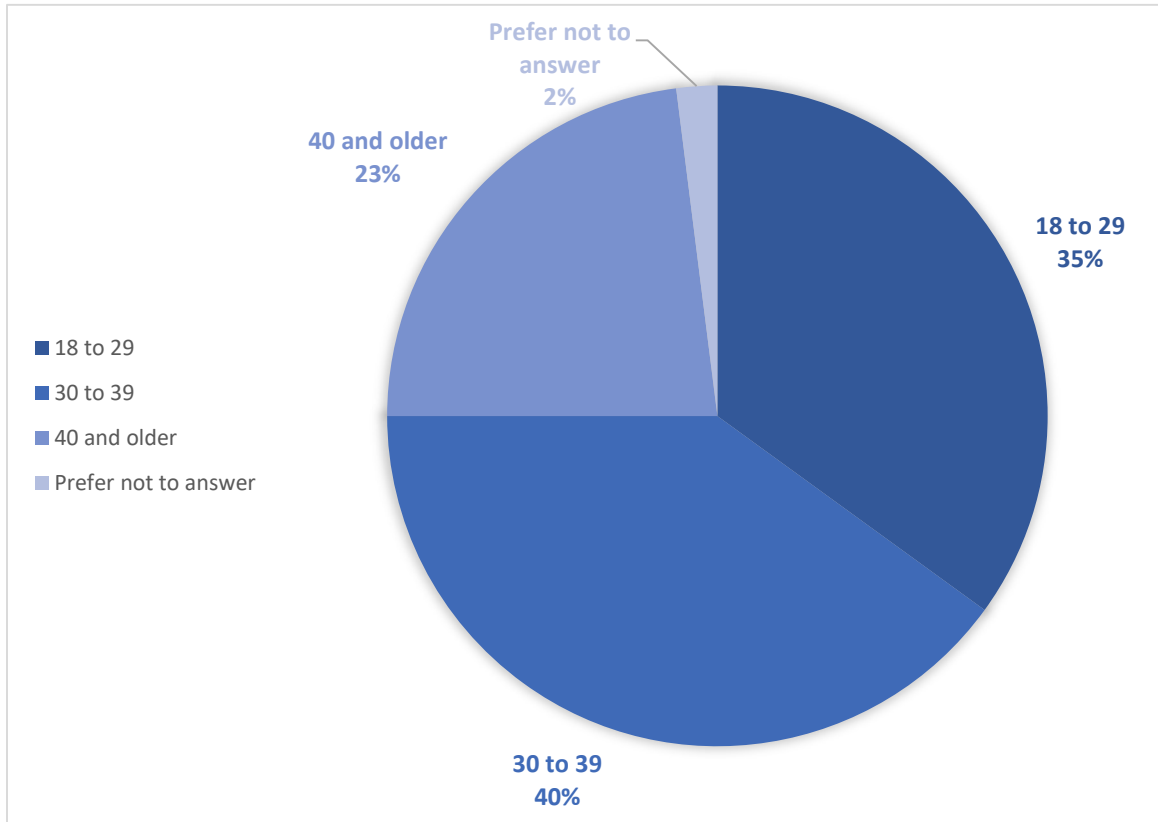

Ethnicity

Learners represent a variety of ethnicities, with a fairly diverse representation. Relative to the Canadian population, CPAWSB learners who completed the survey tend to over-represent those who do not identify as Caucasian/European.

Age

The typical learner is 34 years old, with the largest group between the ages of 30 to 39 years.

Average age

34.2 years

Location

Just over one quarter of learners are living in British Columbia or Alberta, with fewer in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.
